Yankees Need Melting Pot

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

BOSTON—If the future of New England is to be as bright as its past, New Englanders of the old stock must rid themselves of narrow racial prejudices, Dr. Claude M. Fuess, headmaster of Phillips Academy, Andover, told the Boston Congregation Club at its Forefathers' Night.

"What the Yankee needs is reinvigoration," Dr. Fuess admonished. "If he remains isolated he is likely to become like the southern plantation owner in 'Gone With the Wind.' 223 Jewish Refugees Drown As Reef Hit; Sixty Are Children

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

ISTANBUL—Funeral services were held at Silviri Monday for the 103 recovered bodies of the 223 Jews who drowned last Thursday when the small, leaky sailing vessel Salvator on which they had been forced by the Bulgarian authorities to sail for Palestine broke up on a reef in the Sea of Marmora.

Representatives of the Istanbul Jewish community proceeded to Silviri to care for the approximately 150 survivors, with the aid of the Turkish authorities.

Turkish magistrates opened an inquiry into the case and the captain of the ship was detained by the police. The captain said he had protested to the Bulgarian authorities against being forced to sail, but was told, "You must start."

One of the survivors, a journalist, told newspapermen: "The Bulgarian authorities insisted on our departure and refused to allow us time to prepare for the voyage. The ship had neither cabins nor bunks. Cramped together, we were driven aboard, towed out into the Black Sea by a tug and abandoned to our fate."

The ship stopped at Istanbul, the journalist said, then headed for the sea of Marmora, where the vessel ran on a reef during the night. Before the passengers had time to launch the one lifeboat aboard, the ship broke up, throwing its passengers into the raging sea.

The dead, who included some 60 children, were all Jews expelled from Dobruja after Bulgaria had recovered that territory from Rumania. The Salvator was a 60-ton sailing ship with a small auxiliary motor. The survivors were unanimous in praise of the pilot, who swam ashore naked and ran several miles to the village of Silviri to bring aid. Most of those washed ashore had lost their meager possessions and their papers.

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
NEW YORK—An emergency grant of $3,000 to provide first aid to the 126 destitute survivors of the S. S. Salvator, which capsized in the Sea of Marmora last Thursday, was cabled to Istanbul by the Joint Distribution Committee, Executive Vice-Chairman Joseph S. Hyman, announced. Hyman said the survivors, including twenty children, were being well treated by the Turkish authorities. He pointed out the desperate need for clothing and medicines among the disaster victims, who lost all their possessions in the wreck.

Deportation Policy Causes Work Holdup

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
LONDON.—A general stoppage of work and business was held by Jews throughout Palestine, it was learned here, as the Government moved to carry out its policy of deporting illegal immigrants to an island colony for duration of the war.

Fragmentary reports from Jerusalem indicated that the strike began in Haifa when some groups of the more than 2,000 refugees who arrived in Palestine in November and were interned at Atlit were moved to the port city in preparation for deportation.

Menorahs Make A Sea of Light A CHANUKAH STORY IN THE PAST TENSE By ROMAN ROBODIN

I DON'T know how many of you take part in the non-sectarian observance of Christmas which has become so widely customary among American Jews. It's a fairly safe guess that half the Jewish families in the United States observe the Christian holiday as a time with festive dinners, gifts, filling children's stockings and decorating their homes with trees and holly wreaths.

I know how it feels, because for years we used to do those things. If we don't any more, it's because of having spent three winters in Palestine and found out that Chanukah is just as much fun and, for a Jew, decidedly more satisfactory.

They say that in order to enjoy the quintessence of Christmas cheer one must observe the holiday somewhere in the legendary countryside of Merrie Englands. By the same token, Chanukah joys attain their finest flavor in the Holy Land.

First of all, December is a delightful month in Palestine. The first hard rains are over. They have swept away the dust of the long dry season. The fresh green of new growth is everywhere. Wild flowers cover the countryside like multicolored field fires. The orange trees of the coast plantations are weighted down with golden globes. The thick vines on house walls turn into a scarlet plaster of blossom, and the barbed wire fences disappear beneath the clustered purple suns of passion flowers. Days are clear and sunny and balmy; nights are pleasantly crisp, and the moon and stars seem to come right down through the clean-washed sky for a visit to earth.

In this delicious season, Tel Aviv and the Jewish quarters of other Palestinian cities take on the same kind of festive air we associate with Christmas in America. The shops blossom out with toys and gifts and Chanukah specials and window decorations and there is frenzied shopping and gift wrapping, for Palestine Jewry makes Chanukah a season of giving. The innumerable drives for charities, national funds and the like, which are an inescapable part of life in the Jewish National Home, put on extra workers and go into high gear. And on the tops of synagogues and public buildings, big Menorahs appear, thrusting their eight arms skyward. Palestine observes to the full the Talmudic injunction to place the Chanukah lights outdoors.

* * * *

THEN comes the evening when, as the sun goes down, the first of these rooftop lights go on and flash a reply to the neighborly stars. The Menorah atop the Great Synagogue in Tel Aviv can be seen for miles across the level plains of Sharon, while the one on the Reading power station of the Palestine Electric Corporation at the mouth of the River Yarkon shines far over the sea informing mariners that this is a Jewish port. In fact, last winter the great Menorah on the power house served as a beacon for a shipload of Jewish refugees, guiding them to a haven on Tel Aviv beach.

The big rooftop Menorahs are reflected in tens of thousands of windows of Jewish homes. Chanukah is one of the holidays that is observed enthusiastically by all Palestine's Jews, pious or not, because of its obvious nationalist importance. For the children especially, it becomes an occasion for exaltation of Zionist patriotism. There are few schools or kindergartens or playgrounds that fail to build a large part of their program for weeks before the holiday around the heroic story of the Maccabean revolt.

The most impressive of all the events of the holiday week, in fact, is the children's "parade of light" in Tel Aviv. In the late afternoon from every school in the city the pupils march, each with a little Menorah in hand, joining to form a procession of thousands

Chicago U. P. A. Meet Urges Palestine Entry

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
CHICAGO.—A mid-west United Palestine Appeal conference this week adopted a resolution calling upon the British Government to liberalize present regulations governing refugee immigration into Palestine as a means of strengthening its position as a stronghold of British defense in the Mediterranean area.

The resolution said more than 280,000 Jews who had come to Palestine to escape anti-Jewish attacks in Central and Eastern Europe were now taking their place alongside the earlier Jewish settlers in preparing themselves for the protection of the Jewish national home against any Axis assault.

Declaring that even in the midst of economic dislocation created by the war Palestine had absorbed more than 24,000 Jewish immigrants in the first year of the present conflict, the conference urged the British Government "to consider the plight of the first victims of Hitlerism, the Jews in Germany and other Nazi-occupied lands of Europe, many of whom, having left German-held lands, are eager to find liberation in Palestine and who, come valiant members of the forces

Great Britain is rallying in the Middle East."

Clarence W. Efromson was named chairman of the United Jewish Appeal for the State of Indiana.

Church Gives Temple Plaque For Kindness

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—The First Methodist Church has presented a bronze plaque to Rabbi Samuel Gup of Temple Israel as a token of appreciation for the Jewish congregation's action in granting the Christians use of the synagogue for several months when their church was damaged by fire last spring. The presentation was made at a service at the reconstructed church building. The plaque will be hung permanently in the corridor of the temple.

A Grab-Bag party was held by the Kodimo Club Wednesday, at the home of Miss Idel Gorelick, president. Rabbi A. E. Miller gave an address.

AL SEGAL Speaks on World Without Jews

I READ that it is reported from Stockholm that the Nazis of Norway have started a drive against Norwegian Free Masons because there are not enough Jews in Norway for a lusty anti-Semitic campaign.

It seems that for a properly organized hate campaign you've got to have a lot of Jews in a country. Otherwise your efforts to cause division in the country you are trying to conquer may fail.

Lacking Jews, your ingenuity must contrive substitutes. You may take up roller-skaters. A lot of people don't like skaters rolling noisily over their sidewalks and if you are a skillful organizer you can get together quite a crowd of people who hate roller-skaters. You can cause a lot of discussion by a well-directed campaign. As the minds of the people grow more and more furious against roller-skaters you get in your own dirty work toward undermining the nation.

I have in mind, too, the value of snorers as people upon whom to visit organized hate. Nearly everybody knows someone who snores. The thousands who travel in sleeping cars are especially people who could be organized against snorers.

It could be easily pointed out that snorers are in a conspiracy against the economic welfare of the nation. They keep traveling salesmen awake in the sleeping cars with the result that next morning the salesmen are in no mood to pursue their trade with the zest required in a competitive system.

Yes, snorers are in a conspiracy against the competitive system and there is no telling how far an astute leader might go in a campaign against them. He might divide the nation between snorers and anti-snorers. Since nobody admits he snores he would shortly have a majority behind him. Then he would be ready to seize control for the ostensible purpose of suppressing all snorers.

One need only think hard and a variety of good substitutes for Jews will suggest themselves. The ingenious Nazis in occupied Norway, at first troubled to have so few Jews to work on, at last took up Free Masons. The Masons are a brotherhood and brotherhood has nothing to do with boundaries. It may embrace even a lowly Patagonian; it may scorn to kill even a Chinese. Therefore, Masons are not patriots but conspirators plotting to establish a brotherhood of man all around the world. Internationalists! They were the best substitutes for Jews that Nazis could think of at the moment.

Yet Nazis must feel that Masons are inadequate ersatz—like saccharine tablets in place of sugar, or like soybeans in place of coffee, or like any of the other substitutes to which Nazis have had to resort since the war began.

The Nazis in Norway must look back fondly to the time when they had plenty of Jews to feed on in Germany—Jews to kill, Jews to beat with truncheons, Jews to torture in concentration camps. But they make the best of the matter and, like the well-regulated Nazis they are, do what they can with Masons.

But, as they do their best or worst with Masons, they must reflect on a dreadful possibility in the new world order which they are establishing: A new world order without any Jews! If all Jews are to be eliminated the most convenient people to blame everything on will be gone. The situation in Norway underlines this possibility.

If all Jews are to be sequestered, say in Madagascar, so that they will have no part in the world, Nazis will have no one to hold responsible for wars but themselves, no one but themselves to blame for defeats, no one to blame for the poverty of Germans.

When that time arrives nostalgic Nazis will recall the happier day when they could put all their own sins, vices and pains on Jews and feel stronger on that account. It made a Nazi feel superior to think that no evil that happened to him was of his own making but was due to the conspiracies of the Jews.

The Norway situation should give pause to the higher Nazis as they go about their business of building a new world without Jews. Suddenly they have come to an embarrassing shortage of Jews even before their new world is completed.

A far-sighted fuhrer should take into account the possibility of the new world crumbling even as old worlds have. When the people arise and blame it all on his rapacity, on his cruelty, his perverseness against everything decent, what will his defense be if there are no Jews?

Then he will gaze vainly across the continents to the distant island where he put the Jews to keep them out of his world.

"The Jews," he begins by force of an old habit—but the people give out hollow laughter from the emptiness of their bellies; for it is quite awhile since the last Jew was shipped out of the new world order.

He may point to roller-skaters, to snorers, to soup-inhalers or to other groups of people who are disliked, but the country has had to live long enough on substitutes: paper for overcoats, dogs for beef, grass for sauerkraut. The people will accept no substitute for Jews.

The fuhrer, with no Jew to lean on, falls!

As they go about to build and furnish their new world it may occur to the higher Nazis to keep at least one Jew in it against the time of crisis. He may be some conspicuous Jew—some Einstein, some Nobel prize winner, some physician, some musician who by reason of his achievements is sure to be hated by enough Germans.

Then when crisis comes to the new world the fuhrer may say: "This Jew! This Einstein! His cunning intimacy with the universe! He fomented this conspiracy of the universe against us!"

The howling of the mob subsides. The fuhrer leans heavily on the last Jew and keeps on standing.

Jewish Football Greats All In Line This Year

MANY PLAYERS IN BOWL GAMES JEWISH,
NATIONAL SURVEY SHOWS

By MORRIS WEINER

As the 1940 football season goes swinging down memory lane with only the New Year's Day bowl games and the East-West scrap left on the calendar as mighty anti-climaxes to a season that was marked with stirring gridiron thrillers, it's high time to take stock of the Jewish situation in the pigskin world. Unfortunately, during the 1940 campaign, no Hebrew footballer was sufficiently outstanding in the backfield to rate national prominence though there were many to attain sectional honors. On the line, as in previous years, the reputation earned by the Jews on the forward wall again was equaled if not improved. Time was when a football season that had just ended could boast of such national headliners as Barney Mintz and Benny Lom and Dave Smukler or Sid Luckman and a Marshall Goldberg. They were all-American on everybody's selections. Not so this season.

However, such stalwarts as Captain Ackerman of the Tennessee Volunteers will lead his undefeated eleven into action against Boston College on New Year's Day in the Sugar Bowl down in New Orleans. Ackerman was the unanimous choice for center on the All-South selections and he rated only a few notches below Captain Frick of the University of Pennsylvania who was the A. P.'s choice for snapper-backer. Ed Frutig of the Michigan Wolverines won hands down as a unanimous selection for a wing-post spot and as a wing-commander. Ed will play in the East-West game the first of the year with his teammate, Tom Harmon, for the Shriners' charity fund.

Mendelsohn Penn Mainstay

Irving Mendelsohn was one of the east's outstanding guards and although a diminutive figure on the mighty forward wall of the Quakers from the University of Pennsylvania, he was one of the mainstays in a line that cracked only once during the past season and then only under the gargantuan batterings of Tom Harmon of Michigan. Mendelsohn was voted the best line player in the recent Cornell Penn grid classic. He too will play in the East-West game at San Francisco with his teammate, Frank Reagan. Frutig and Mendelsohn, who battered each other for sixty minutes in the Penn-Michigan tilt, will now be buddies as will Tom Harmon and Frank Reagan.

Hall Schwartzkopf of the Nebraska Cornhuskers has been outstanding at the guard spot throughout the past season. He is the prairie's contribution to the big guns among Jewish football heroes this season. Morris Moshofsky, left tackle, and Ben Jacobson, center, both from Oregon State, are part of the far western contingent that must come in for their share of glory. Also from the slopes of the far west, throughout the last three months, came glowing reports of Al Cohen, the brilliant snapper-backer for the U. C. L. A. eleven, and of Staffler, end for California.

Rose Bowl Tradition Holds

Although Nebraska has been selected as Stanford's rival in the game of games on New Year's Day, one thing is certain—the tradition that a Jewish football player will be represented on one of the teams that plays in this bowl of bowls (a rose by any other name, you know) will continue unbroken. Lee Graff, easily the coast's finest end, is all set to carry on in the manner of Horween and Benny Lom and Herb Fleishaker and the score of other Jewish boys who have performed in the Rose Bowl tilt during the last twenty years.

Harry "Babe" Hamberg, the mighty mite among the tall oaks that comprise the Arkansas eleven, proved one of the fieriest atoms to cavort on the grid since Albie Booth played at Yale. Hamberg, actually the only man under six feet on the Arkansas first team eleven, sparked his club to victory in all but the Fordham game when the Arks visited New York.

And so it goes—there are hundreds of moleskin-clad warriors who have not been mentioned in these columns during the football season, but, as we mentioned at the beginning of the campaign in September, this would be an impossible task since the numbers of Jewish football players are increasing constantly from year to year.

We could easily have picked another Jewish all-American much in the same way we did some five and ten years ago but to no purpose. Our contention still holds good. If the Jewish boys named by us were of sufficient caliber to rate national prominence they would have been selected by experts around the country. Our contention was borne out when Ackerman was chosen by the South, Mendelsohn by the East, Graff by the West, Frutig by the Mid-West and Friedman by the North. To be sure, no Jewish back was of Tommy Harmon proportions this year so that an entire nation could unite and say "You're tops" as they did to Marshall Goldberg some few years back or to Benny Friedman some twelve years ago, but for that matter, and here we borrow a phrase from the Brooklyn baseball fans: Wait till next year.

"Congress in special session again." The winner of the Sid Seligman prize last Sunday morning, Bob ("Hat of the Month") Congress. This Adam hatter "covered up his weakness (that is—missing the "head pin") and turned in games of 188, 130 and 190 for a 508 actual count. With his 123 handicap, Bob won hands up. He also anticipates better results as soon as Phil Stern delivers the bowling shoes Bob won several weeks ago.

A new legion was in evidence last week as the Netzorg Capitals turned "kosher"! Inspired by the antics of Dave Yaver, "the fashionable haberdasher," this Netzorg contingent, composed of Sam Mantel, William Meyers Jr., Bob Netzorg, Lou Sagalowsky and William Meyers Sr., donned their hats in order to change their luck and combat the onslaught of their opponents, the Kosof Keglers! As a result the final game was pulled out of the fire for a win (thanks to Maxie's blow).

The Shane Specials signed up a dark horse named Liebowitz, who hails from Milwaukee. This young fellow started off with a bang by crashing the wood for a 241 score. Then he became conscious and bowled his average. Glad to welcome the newcomer and his wife, who was a witness to the exhibition.

Bud Mossler, who still remains in good standing as a member of Sid Seligman's "Pants Droopers," was unable to bowl last Sunday, but came over with his cute little daughter to observe his team in action. Secretary Mac Cassen, the other remaining "Drooper," also missed active duty, but was an hand to tabulate the results, etc. Max is responsible for any errors in averages, so get on him for mistakes.

After the first of the year, we hope to be organized so out-of-the-city fraternal matches can be scheduled. Any information concerning "bookings" will be appreciated.

Miss Emma Messing and Miss Lilly Timm landed Monday in New York City on the S. S. Excalibur of the American Export Line. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Harding of Upsen Downs, Leonardtown, Md., sister and brother-in-law of Miss Messing, were out at the pier to meet them and they are now in Maryland as the guests of the Hardings.

Mrs. M. Goldberg has as her guest, her sister, Mrs. B. Bernstein, of Evansville.

Mrs. Lloyd Laudeker, of Chicago, spent several days last week with her cousin, Mr. S. Carroll Kahn and Mrs. Kahn.

CHANUKAH LIGHT

Professor Albert Einstein will light the Chanukah candle at a Chanukah concert given on December 30 at the Jewish Art Theater in New York. The concert will be preceded by Maurice Schwartz's presentation of "Yoshe Kalb," proceeds of which will go to the "British war relief committee." Mrs. Roosevelt leads the list of patrons of this affair and may attend the performance which will be given in Yiddish.

Many make the mistake of believing that Chanukah celebrates the victory of the Maccabees in a war with the Greeks, whereas the war was actually with the Syrians. This point is especially important now when we all want to see the Greeks completely victorious in their war with Italy.

MODERN MACCABEES

More than 700 Jews in Warsaw staged an anti-Nazi street demonstration upon completion of the eight-foot concrete ghetto-wall. The Nazi did not succeed in arresting any of the demonstrators, since they all disappeared before Nazi units arrived to disperse them.

Dressed in German uniforms, a daring group of Czech patriots in Prague stole German army trucks and "took delivery" of 30,000 rifles from a Prague plant. Neither the men, nor the trucks, nor the arms have been found by the Gestapo. Another group stole twelve German tanks and armored cars from a motor park in Prague and drove them out to some underground hiding place for future use.

In Cracow, the seat of Nazi Governor Frank, a Polish student managed to steal a jacket belonging to a German officer. Mounting a wagon in the market place he began an impassioned speech in Polish urging the Poles to rise to revolt. In no time he had crowds of hundreds applauding feverishly. German officers watched approvingly, marveling at their colleague's ability to sway this crowd of aliens in their native language. Finally one of them sensed something wrong and sent for the Gestapo, but before any German arrived who could understand the speech, the student had vanished and the market place was empty.

SOCIAL NOTES

My friend Leonard Lyons felates in his daily column in the New York Post the following: Paul Warburg went to a party where a beautiful lady, with a new, blonde coiffure, greeted him affectionately. "Er—hel-lo," Warburg hesitantly acknowledged. The lady drew back, startled, and said, disappointedly: "You don't remember me." "But I do," Warburg protested. "Er—I've been to your house many times, and you've visited ours." "That's right," she agreed, "but you don't remember me." "But I—I do," Warburg assured. "Why, we've—er—we've known each other for many, many years." "Well," sighed the lady, "I never thought the day would come when it would be necessary for me to ask such a question. But," she shrugged, "it's come, and I must ask it. What's my name?" "All right, I give up," Warburg confessed. "Tell me—what's your name?" And so she told him—slowly, distinctly, letting each vowel and syllable strike clearly. She told him: "N-o-r-m-a S-h-e-a-r-e-r."

Paper is so scarce in Scotland that the "Jewish Echo" of Glasgow is now using old J. T. A. news releases as wrapper to mail the publication to its subscribers.

Several members of the J. D. C. staff in Paris have reached New York en route to the Dominican Republic, where they will settle as colonists.

Dr. Mark Wischnitzer, Jewish historian and social worker, arrived in New York on his way to Santo Domingo. He was director of the Hilfsverein of German Jews in Berlin.

"Spunkie" is the name of a new daily comic strip which will be released for the American press by the United Feature Syndicate picturing the life and adventures of a kid refugee from over the sea. America will love Spunkie from its first glimpse of him, as Spunkie loved America before his first glimpse of it.

A new synagogue is being built in Tel Aviv by the Keren Hayesod (Palestine Foundation Fund) with money bequeathed by the late Mr. N. Krantz of Australia. The building will be located on Jewish National Fund land in Zamenhoff street. It will be one of the most imposing structures in the city. A new synagogue also has been completed in Haifa.

MY LITTLE BOY

Reprinted from the book "Candles In the Night," Jewish Tales by Gentile Authors, by Courtesy of Charles Scribner's Sons.

By CARL EWALD

There is a battle royal and a great hullabaloo among the children in the courtyard.

I hear them shouting "Jew!" and I go to the window and see my little boy in the front rank of the bandits, screaming, fighting with clenched fists and without his cap.

I sit down quietly to my work again, certain that he will appear before long and ease his heart.

And he comes directly after.

He stands still, as is his way, by my side and says nothing. I steal a glance at him: he is greatly excited and proud and glad, like one who has fearlessly done his duty.

"What fun you've been having down there!"

"Oh," he says modestly, "it was only a Jew boy whom we were licking."

I jump up so quickly I upset my chair:

"A Jew boy? Were you licking him? What had he done?"

"Nothing . . ."

His voice is not very certain, for I look so queer.

And that is only the beginning. For now I snatch my hat and run out of the door as fast as I can and shout:

"Come, come; we must find him and beg his pardon!"

My little boy hurries after me. He does not understand a word of it, but he is terribly in earnest. We look in the courtyard; we shout and call. We rush into the street and round the corner, so eager are we to come up with him. Breathlessly, we ask three passers-by if they have not seen a poor, ill-fed Jew boy.

All in vain: the Jew boy and all his persecutors are blown away into space.

So we go and sit up in my room again, the laboratory where our soul is crystallized out of the big events of our little life. My forehead is wrinkled and I drum disconsolately with my fingers on the table. The boy has both his hands in his pockets and does not take his eyes from my face.

"Well," I say, decidedly, "there is nothing more to be done. I hope you will meet that Jew boy one day, so that you can give him your hand and ask him to forgive you. You must tell him that you did that only because you were stupid. But if, another time, anyone does him any harm, I hope you will help him lick the other one as long as you can stir a limb."

I can see by my little boy's face that he is ready to do what I wish. For he is still a mercenary, who does not ask under which flag, so long as there is a battle and booty to follow. It is my duty to train him to be a brave recruit, who will defend his fair motherland, and so I continue:

"Let me tell you, the Jews are by way of being quite wonderful people. You remember David, about whom Dirty reads at school: he was a Jew boy. And the Child Jesus, whom everybody worships and loves, although He died two thousand years ago: He was a little Jew also."

My little boy stands with his arms on my knee and I go on with my story.

The old Hebrews rise before our eyes in all their splendor and power, quite different from Dirty's Balslev. They ride on their camels in coats of many colors and with long beards: Moses and Joseph and his brethren and Samson and David and Saul. We hear wonderful stories. The walls of Jericho fall at the sound of the trumpet.

"And what next?" says my little boy, using the expression which he employed when he was much smaller and which still comes to his lips whenever he is carried away.

Rabbi Taxay Installs Temple Israel Officers

Special
TERRE HAUTE—At the annual meeting the the United Temple last Thursday election of officers and trustees was held. Friday evening in a ceremony at Temple Israel Rabbi J. Marshall Taxay installed the newly elected officers as follows: President, Benjamin Blumberg; vice president, Lewis Sutin; secretary, David Rosenfeld, and treasurer, Philip Kleeman. Trustees were Mrs. Carl Wolf, Louis Brown, Ike Ades, Harry N. Levin, Maier M. Levin, Abe Rosenfeld, Alfred Strouse, Carl Wolf and Frank J. Wolfe.

Mrs. Ellias Berkowitz, president, represented Temple B'nai Abraham Auxiliary and Mrs. Adolph Joseph, president, Temple Israel Sisterhood.

The regular monthly meeting of the local Hadassah chapter was held Thursday, Dec. 19, at the home of Mrs. Melvin J. Goodman, at which time Mrs. David Kahn, one of the members, read a paper on the life of Henrietta Szold, in honor of whose eightieth birthday the program was dedicated.

Temple Israel Sisterhood held its regular monthly meeting in the vestry rooms of the temple Monday, at which time Mrs. Mitchell Thomas read a review of Rabbi Steinberg's "As a Driven Leaf."

Friday, Dec. 20, the children of the Religious School of Temple Israel will conduct the services and present a Chanukah playlet in which they will participate. A Palestinian picture in technicolor also will be shown. After a reading by one of the children on the subject, "The Life of Henrietta Szold," the children will be presented with Chanukah gifts by the Sisterhood. Study Circle under the auspices of the local section of the Council of Jewish Women will be this Friday instead of last Tuesday with Mrs. Mitchell Thomas, chairman, and Rabbi J. Marshall Taxay, leader. "Chanukah Observance in the Home" will be discussed.

Rabbi J. Marshall Taxay and Louis Brown were in Chicago to attend the United Palestine Appeal conference last week-end. Rabbi Taxay was a member of the resolutions committee.

Mrs. Alfred Berkowitz (nee Selma Schultz) and twin sons are back again in their home, 242 Barton avenue. These twins are the third set born in Jewish circles here. Residing in our midst also are Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Joseph and their twin sons, now 15 years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Reibel, formerly of Terre Haute but now of Detroit, also have twin sons born here.

Miss Jane Lee Goodman, daughter of Mrs. Isaac L. Goodman, will leave around the first of the year for Chicago to enter the graduate school of the University of Chicago to begin work on her master's degree, majoring in social work. Miss Goodman, who is a graduate of Indiana State Teachers College, has for the past three years been associated with the Family Welfare Society of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goodman, 627 South Seventh street, had as their week-end guests their children, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Goodman of Chicago. Their daughter, Mrs. Louis Gross, and son Robert of Memphis, Tenn., were here the week previous to attend the funeral of the late Max Mandel.

Jerusalem and how the Jews took their little boys by the hand and wandered from place to place, scoffed at, despised and ill-treated. How they were allowed to own neither house nor land, but could only be merchants, and how the Christian robbers took all the money which they had got together.

45 Children Leave For Palestine Trip

Special
LONDON—Youth Aliyah (Palestine immigration) from Denmark has been resumed with the departure of 45 children, part of a group of 270 who reached Denmark before the German occupation for agricultural training, Youth Aliyah headquarters here announced.

Special permission was obtained from the British authorities for the entire group to proceed to Palestine (Continued on Page 15.)

How, nevertheless, they remained true to their God and kept up their old sacred customs in the midst of the strangers who hated and persecuted them.

The whole day is devoted to the Jews.

We look at old books on the shelves which I love best to read and which are written by a Jew with a wonderful name, which a little boy can't remember at all. We learn that the most famous man now living in Denmark is a Jew.

And when evening comes and Mother sits down at the piano and sings the song which Father loves above all other songs, it appears that the words were written by one Jew and the melody composed by another.

My little boy is hot and red when he falls to sleep that night. He turns restlessly in bed and talks in his sleep.

"He is a little feverish," says his mother.

And I bend down and kiss his forehead and answer, calmly:

"That is not surprising. Today I have vaccinated him against the meanest of all mean and vulgar diseases."

of youngsters. The parade winds down the tree-shaded length of Rothschild Boulevard and swings up Allenby Road to a vast open field on the city's outskirts. By the time they have all assembled there, darkness has fallen. The army of boys and girls is sensed rather than seen. Then at a signal each child lights the little candle in his Menorah and holds it aloft. In an instant the field becomes a rippling lake of tens of thousands of light, with the childish faces seeming to float under the fiery surface, childish voices filling the night with a vast, high-pitched harmony of song.

All of this should have been told in the past tense. Chanukah is not being observed in such a style this year in Palestine. The blackout against air-raids has quenched the big rooftop Menorahs and the little ones in the windows and veiled the shop fronts at night and barred the children with their candles from the streets. But there will be other Chanukahs, when the land of Israel will again be set aglow every night for eight nights with myriads of candles.

I remarked before that since observing Chanukah in Palestine we aren't interested in Christmas any more. The children settled that. Christmas had always been a big time for them, what with presents and the tree and the turkey dinner. But during their first Chanukah in the Holy Land, one night when the little Menorah in their window had been lighted, without any prompting they said: "Mother, we don't want any more Christmas trees or Christmas stockings or presents, even when we go home to America. Let's always celebrate Chanukah."

MY RESPONSIBILITY TO JEWISH SURVIVAL

Essay Winning First Prize In State Sisterhood Convention Contest Given

In the Essay Contest conducted by the Indiana State Federation of Temple Sisterhoods among the Jewish high school students of Indiana on the subject "My Responsibility Toward Jewish Survival," David Alan Hamburg, 15, of the Bosse High School, Evansville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hamburg, won the first prize. The essay follows:

TODAY, in a world beset with bloody conquerors whose express purpose is to destroy the entire Jewish race, it is plainly the duty of every Jew to do his utmost for the preservation of his people and his great heritage of culture, ethic and tradition. It is especially important that we, the growing generation, realize our great responsibility toward the survival of our people in these extremely ominous times.

As a young Jew it is my duty to acquaint myself with the problems which confront my people and to prepare myself to help solve them. In order to do this I must understand clearly the forces within Jewry itself which are tending to undermine us as well as those who are attacking us from the outside.

The main cause for the internal disintegration of Jewry is lack of interest in Jewish education. Today thousands of Jews have little, if any, contact with Jewish institutions, and are Jews in name only. They have lost the faith of their forefathers, and consequently are filled with doubt and uncertainty as to their purpose in life.

This sad state of affairs has been reached because Jewish education has been neglected. As a young Jew, it is my duty to secure a thorough Jewish education, to become acquainted with the great and proud history of my people, and with the noble moral and spiritual truths which our faith teaches. Only by so doing can I become a complete Jew, proud of my heritage, ready to take my place among my fellow men. I must also help foster and support our institutions of Jewish learning, our synagogues and our temples, for only by instilling in our hearts a real interest in our religion can we hope to keep the flame of faith burning in our hearts, and in so doing, insure the preservation of Judaism. It is also my duty to do all I can to help my Jewish brethren, less fortunate than I, wherever they may be, and to assist those organizations which are aiding the oppressed and persecuted, and are trying to transplant them to lands where they can have another chance at life. I must aid in the development of Palestine, for in so doing I am not only helping provide a place of refuge for our homeless Jews, but am helping to insure a continuation of the Hebrew language, traditions and culture.

I must see that my colleagues and I become active members of Jewish youth organizations as soon as our age permits us to do so. Young Judaea, A. Z. A., Junior Hadassah and Hillel, for college youth, all these are invaluable for the development of good Jewish men and women, and will prepare us to take our place in the important work of Jewish adult activities in the future.

THE forces which are trying to destroy Judaism from the outside are those same forces of reaction which are trying to destroy Democracy and Christianity and all the ideals of peace and good will among men that have been built up through painful centuries of struggle.

Although I must do all in my power to combat anti-Semitism by refuting the lies and accusations of our enemies and exposing the baseness of their motives and characters, I must fully realize that it is only through the preservation of the democratic institutions of the world that we Jews can exist. Consequently, I must align myself with those who are fighting to defend those institutions from destruction. I must fight the fight for freedom, and in so doing I am not only fighting for a better world to live in, but also for the preservation of our race.

Finally, as a Jewish youth, I must resolve to be a good American and a good citizen of the community in which I live. I must never forget that the good name, the well-being of my people depend upon my deeds, and upon those of my fellow Jews. I must take an active, unselfish part in the activities of my city and of my country, spreading good will wherever I go. I must always conduct myself on a high ethical and moral plane, which alone is compatible with being a good Jew and a good American. In so doing, I will not only be living a worthy life, but I will be shouldering my responsibility towards the survival of my people.

PHI BETA DELTA

Special

BLOOMINGTON — Yesterday and today all the actives and pledges of Alpha Theta, Phi Beta Delta, scattered to the four winds to return to their homes in celebration of the winter holidays. The usually noisy and cheery chapter house will be deserted until Jan 6, when school will again resume sessions.

Phi Beta Delta has remained near the front of the university intramural athletics by their outstanding showing in the handball contests. Stanley Schwartz and Felix Bogart are winning their respective leagues, and if they retain their unbroken winning streaks, will play in the inter-league playoffs. Gersten Rappaport has done great work by dropping only one match in a very tough league. He and Schwartz will team up in the doubles competition which will begin next semester. They won the school championship last year.

The minor league basketball team started its season in a blaze of glory by snatching a hard-fought game from the Theta Chi, 20-19. Max Stein, midget forward, netted a long push shot in the last thirty seconds of play, to settle a game which had been nip and tuck all the way. Abe Schuchman was high scorer for the Phi Beta Deltas with nine points on four baskets and a free throw. Members of the strong minor league squad are Stein, Schuchman, Gene Glick, Lou Sosin, Sid Jaffe, Hal Coleman, Sid Isaacs, Bob Weiss, Dave Jacobowitz, Howie Cohn and Phil Shrifin.

The first oilcloth factory ever to be established in Palestine was recently opened in Jerusalem for the production of raincoats as well as rubber-coated cloth.

FORT WAYNE

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL

(Copyright, 1940, by Seven Arts Feature Syndicate)
By PHINEAS BIRON

TRANSATLANTIC—Have we ever pointed out to you that Jean Chiappe, the French police officer who was killed while flying to Syria to teach the natives a lesson, was the owner of Le Gringoire, France's most anti-Semitic paper? . . . Being no numerologist, we can't cite chapter and verse, but there's a story current that numerologically Hitler is mentioned in the Book of Revelations, and in no complimentary manner either. . . . Europe's most famous astrologists, incidentally, say that it's written in the stars that Hitler will die in 1941. . . . It's being whispered around town that the Italian fiasco—or quitzkrieg, as somebody has called it—in the Near East may cause Hitler to bring fifth column activities to a head in India. . . . But don't let anybody tell you that Hitler thinks he's God Almighty Himself. . . . Even Gabby Goebels claims only that the Feurhrer is the intermediary between his people and the throne of God. . . . The extent of the freedom now enjoyed by the French can be gauged by the fact that even a comic strip which used to refer to "Huns" now must call its villains "Patagonians." . . . The special authorization required before anyone can go from occupied France to the unoccupied territory costs 5,000 francs for Aryans, but twice as much for Jews.

ABOUT PEOPLE—One of the most winning personalities and best speakers in Jewish public life is Edward Warburg, son of the late Felix M. Warburg. . . . Young Warburg has a mind of his own, too. . . . Albert Bassermann, one of the outstanding non-Jewish German refugees, and who is making good in Hollywood, may be seen on Broadway this season if playwright Clifford Odets has his way. . . . We don't remember whether we ever told you that George Brent, who's 100 per cent Irishman, played the role of Abie in one of the "Abie's Irish Rose" road companies years and years ago. . . . But something we've just learned is that Renee Carroll, Broadway's most famous hat-check girl, is the daughter of an Orthodox rabbi named Shapiro. . . . Milton Berle, who's in Hollywood, has a new stand-in—Al Payne, who a decade or so ago was known as Abe Bain, the Ghetto Assassin, and at the time had middleweight boxing championship aspirations. . . . Hedy Lamarr, whom Hollywood has rediscovered at last, is said to be the latest romantic interest of Woolworth Donahue, five-and-ten heir.

THIS AND THAT—Hyman Berter, the Manhattan taxi driver who wound up all his affairs in preparation for his year in the army, and then was rejected because of poor eyesight, insists that anyone who for years has been able to wind his way through Times Square traffic, as he has, would be able to guide a tank straight to Berchtesgaden. . . . Merton Ginzburg is compiling a Jewish Who's Who that will be more complete than anything yet attempted. . . . We believe we've already told you that orchestra leader Meyer Davis has a profitable sideline in bowling alleys—but now, you should know, he's the undisputed leader in that industry, with ten establishments in various parts of the country. . . . Broadway is looking forward to a new Elmer Rice play, entitled "Flight to the West," and having an anti-Nazi theme. . . . If you'd like to see the late David Belasco again, be sure you see "Lady with Red Hair," in which the famed producer-playwright is portrayed by Claude Rains. . . . Congratulations to Boris Smolar who, we understand, is the new face behind Paul Peters' column, "Between You and Me."

despite the fact they were coming from enemy-occupied territory. The group is expected to arrive in Palestine before Dec. 21, the eightieth birthday of Miss Henrietta Szold, held of the Youth Aliyah. Transit visas have been secured for the remaining 225, who are expected to leave soon.

Another 667 children, including groups in Lithuania, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Sweden, Bulgaria, Rumania, Cyprus and Greece, will leave in the near future. The remainder of a total of 1,600 immigration certificates will be distributed as soon as transportation can be arranged. The Youth Aliyah office is making efforts to transfer to Palestine refugee children in unoccupied France whose parents are already in the Holy Land.

The Editor's Chair:

Oddly enough, the improvement in the Anglo-Jewish publishing field is creating quite a problem for me. It used to be my practice when the exchanges arrived to throw them in a drawer and then in my spare time go through them as carefully as their contents warranted.

Then when the Contemporary Jewish Record was first published by the American Jewish Committee, I began taking home the more voluminous periodicals and pages from the other papers, which I would tear out when something longer and "heavier" than usual attracted me.

That solved the problem for only a short while. Most of the Anglo-Jewish papers are non-descript except those few which write their own editorials and cover their local field comprehensively. I don't mean to say that the papers are not of interest to local readers, but unless their editorials are home-written and have some profundity, and unless they go out of their way to get feature stories, a glance suffices for them.

But now, what with the new dress of "The New Palestine" and "The Congress Bulletin," I find I need another answer. I take the bunch of material home with me, but try as I might I can't find time to go through them all. Both the Bulletin and the New Palestine have many interesting articles, not to mention "The Workmen's Circle Call," and require more than just ten or fifteen minutes, if I'm not to miss anything worth while.

On my desk now, to take home with me this very moment, is an article by Joseph C. Hyman, executive vice chairman of the J. D. C., which I read once, but thought meaty enough to deserve a second reading; the current issue of "The New Palestine," a brochure by the Zionist Organization of America on "Membership," and the Nov. 29 issue of "The New Palestine" which for some reason I didn't get to finish when it arrived that week.

It is getting so that it's hard to find time to read even The Jewish Post.

The improvement in the Anglo-Jewish press certainly deserves the highest commendation, yet if I'm to have any rest at all, I suggest to my editorial confreres that they lower their high editorial standards, so for a while at least I can "take it easy."

Poor Statesmanship In Silence

THE turn of angry opinion in American Jewry against England's unjust action in connection with the extra-legal immigrants in Palestine provides the climax to a clear exposition of the tight hegemony Dr. Chaim Weizmann holds over Zionist thinking throughout the world, and offers the clearest recent incident of the repeated failure of the great scientist as a Zionist leader.

Even before England had time to prepare a statement, Zionist leaders were in the press with apologies for England's cruel decision. Heading this list of apologetes for Great Britain was Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

Let it not be thought that any weakening of England's hand in her fight against the Axis is involved. Only one point is germane, and that is that England should be responsible for her own acts. Even in England many actions of the government are criticised, and severely too, by opposition elements, who are just as concerned with the war effort as anyone.

No official of the Z. O. A. has risen to voice an opinion. This might not be so remarkable were it not for the fact that all over the United States from the rank and file of not only Zionists, but American Jewry as a whole, the wrath of the mine run of Jews has broken through. Led by a few courageous Anglo-Jewish editors, and the fine editorial in The Reconstructionist, the groundlessness of England's official explanation that Nazi spies might enter Palestine with the immigrants or the fear of Arab reaction has been exposed.

England is pursuing her last White Paper's decision to cut off all Jewish immigration to Palestine. It takes no great knowledge of world affairs to understand that if the Zionist leadership does not change its present policy England will continue elatedly and unopposed toward its goal of making Palestine a part of the empire entirely in its own control and with the Jewish population and enterprise stalemated at its present strength.

A Subject For Alfred Segal's Column

ALTHOUGH Alfred Segal probably doesn't need the suggestion in this editorial, The Post hastens to call his attention to a speech made by Dr. Claude M. Fuess, headmaster of staid, old Phillips Academy, Andover, made before the staid, old Boston Congregation Club. Both parties to the speech were the finest representatives of all that is finest in old New England families.

Said Dr. Fuess: "What the Yankee needs is reinvigoration. If he remains isolated he is likely to become like the southern plantation owner in 'Gone With the Wind.' We should not avoid the melting pot, for as it boils over we shall have new Websters and Adamsses to defend our liberties, even though they bear Polish, Italian and Jewish names."

Mr. Segal probably will read the notice of the speech Friday, and no doubt over the week-end will write his column, "Plain Talk," devoting it to Fuess' talk. Then the column will go to the Seven Arts Feature Syndicate office in New York for distribution the following week to the Anglo-Jewish press. So in several weeks you can read Mr. Segal's quaint interpretation of this bold deduction right here in your own Jewish Post.

Why All American Jewry Not Zionists, Explained by Rabbi Eugene Kohn, Managing Editor of The Reconstructionist Magazine—The trouble with Zionist propaganda in America is that it has understated the Zionist case. Zionist propaganda rested its case mainly on secular nationalism. It made its appeal in behalf of those elements in European Jewry who could not or would not assimilate with the non-Jewish majority. This made it appear perfectly legitimate for American Jews who felt that they could assimilate to do so. It made it all right for those who had been taught to think of Judaism as a religion only to feel that Zionism had no particular meaning for them. They were not necessarily antagonistic to helping those Jews who felt themselves maladjusted in the diaspora to build up a national home in Palestine, but they did not identify themselves with the enterprise, did not feel that Palestine was their national home.

Even Zionist propaganda based on Ahad Ha'am's conception of spiritual Zionism did not appeal. It made the basis of adherence to Zionism the desire to perpetuate Jewish culture. But most American Jews—"in consequence of our many sins"—have acquired no Jewish culture and hence have no interest in perpetuating it. Hebrew language and literature is as foreign to them as Greek. Hence the propaganda left them unaffected.

To appeal to American Jews, Zionist propaganda should have addressed itself to fundamental religious and ethical needs. It should have stressed the universal ideals which are implicit in the movement. This does not mean that that propaganda need soft-pedal the national aspect of Judaism, but that it should stress the relation of Jewish nationalism to universal ethical ideals and fundamental religious concepts. Above all, it should stress its relation to the ideal of democracy.

Missionaries to the Jews Needed Says The Jewish Ledger of New Orleans—A Smith College professor of religion was so impressed with Jewish ceremonies and the institutional forces which cement the bonds within the Jewish home that he invited a group of Jewish girls at Smith for a Friday evening dinner, and began with the beautiful Kiddush. Many of the Jewish girls admitted they had never seen the ceremony before.

James G. McDonald, former high commissioner for the League of Nations, to deal with refugee problems, undertook to learn more about the literature and lore of the people with whom he had increasingly to work. He studied anew the Bible, he read translations of Talmud, he delved deeply into every nook and cranny of Jewish literature, history, philosophy, belles-lettres, poetry and fiction. The more he read the more his admiration grew.

Not only this, he determined to tell the many Jewish audiences, which clamored for his presence, of his admiration, and, as a brilliant scholar, he gave examples from Jewish sources, quoted chapter, verse, poem, incident and author.

What was Mr. McDonald's discovery? Not that he had discovered the treasury of Jewish literature, of which so little is known in the broader circle without the Jewish fold. He discovered that the Jews did not know the sources he quoted, nor the names of the books to which he referred. The discovery was even more phenomenal—to him—than the original reaction to the literature itself.

Now, it is said, Mr. McDonald sets himself the task to acquaint Jewish audiences with Jewish literature.

Such a situation needs no commentary. It is unbelievably pathetic. It is short-sighted, it is actually unconscious self-denial. But it is more than this. It is unnatural and abnormal.

Every people takes a characteristic pride in its culture. Moreover, it take an especial pride in inducting its young into the knowledge of its past and its lore. Of course, a generation cannot give what it does not possess, and perhaps the fault in America lies a generation removed.

Nevertheless, there has been an awakening within American circles, within the past few years, which has produced much, both in translation and in original interpretation. There is no excuse for ignorance of our literature, except it be indifference and disinterestedness.

Peculiarly enough, the Jews are probably the best read, the biggest buyers of books, and the most interested group in literature, music and art of all America's families.

Perhaps a few more Smith professors and a few more McDonalds may restore Israel to an interest its writers, scholars, teachers, speakers and rabbis have failed to achieve. More power to such missionaries!
